Press Release April 11, 2008

Prevas signs global agreement with National Instruments

Prevas today announced that the company has signed a global agreement with National Instruments regarding services related to their products.

National Instruments (NI) is transforming the way engineers and scientists design, prototype and deploy systems for measurement, automation and embedded applications. NI empowers customers with off-the-shelf software such as NI LabVIEW and modular cost-effective hardware and sells to a broad base of more than 25,000 different companies worldwide each year. Headquartered in Austin, Texas, NI has more than 4,300 employees and direct operations in nearly 40 countries.

"The global agreement with National Instruments strengthens our mission to be a Nordic design house with the world as the market and is also a confirmation from National Instruments that Test System Design, one of our Centre of excellence is in world class.", says Mats Lundberg, CEO at Prevas.

The test system design group develops advanced test and simulator systems for embedded products. The majority of those systems is based on products from National Instruments such as LabVIEW and are already in use at many locations around the world.

"We are very pleased to sign a global agreement with an industry expert like Prevas that partners with NI to provide customers with turn-key, high quality-solutions based on graphical system design.", says Tony Vento, Vice-President of Applications Engineering.

Prevas carries out product development in six "centres of excellence" that focus on different customer groups and industries, enabling Prevas to meet the unique growing needs of each industry. In general the trend is moving toward greater demands for design, quality, connection options and shorter development times for both industrial and consumer products.

Prevas has more than 20 years of experience developing advanced embedded systems and has developed more than 2,000 successful products enabling many of its customers to become global leaders in their respective areas.
